Mommy, no matter how many years pass it doesn't get easier to come to terms that you are no longer here, it only gets harder. I know you are no longer in pain and suffering. I hope that you see everything now. (You know what I'm talking about) Just know that you are dearly missed and not a day goes by my that I don't think of you and replay the last words you whispered to me before I left. I am trying my hardest to live up to those words. I love you so much, Mommy. What I would give to have you here with us. I don't think I could put a dollar amount on it, I would give up all my possessions to just be able to hug you and hear your voice again. Until we meet again my beautiful Best friend and Mother. I love you more than you'll ever know. Xoxo
