In acceptance and coming to terms with the recent passing of MY Mom, Im strong enough to share my heart. Tomorrow will make it 1 month since the first day of spring when she met our Lord and Savior. Mom was the sole provider of our family of 5 for many years. I was raised in a small 2bedroom 1 bath home. No garage, No front or back porch, No A.C. Or heat, No pets. The point is clear, very basic. However I never know I was missing something. My mom loved, cared, cleaned and most importantly, PROVIDED all my needs. I always felt accepted and lifted up with I was with her. My mom never complained about what she didn't have or how someone wronged her. If there was something she didn't have or if something major broke (like the main water supply into the house) she quickly adapted and moved forward. I don't know how she ever did it, alone. She didn't drive until the age of 40. Somehow again I never felt like we were lacking anything. My mothers demeanor when something did go wrong seem to always be calm. We always got though it. She didn't have anything more to give us but Love and a safe home. I'm the woman I am today from her strong will to not Rely on others. I remember asking her why she never sought out assistance from child support being she worked for the State of Florida. She replied with, I never wanted a hand out or a dime from anyone because they with then have say in you girls lives. She always wanted to protect us, no matter what the cost. Lastly, everyone that knew her, yearly was sent a Birthday Card & a call in your birthday from her. This only proves she cared more about the relationship than the materials she didn't have. I feel this is why I never felt like, there was something missing. She stay focused on doing what mattered. I love you mom and miss you dearly. See you soon. Tammy

I got to know Jean in morningside where I grew up. My best friend was Tammy. Just one of Jean beautiful daughters. Tammy and I could not be separated. I spent the night all the time. Meanwhile Jean and Bob would make us dinner and breakfast. Those were the good day's. Sunday mornings we would go to church come home and watch T.V with Tammy Jean and Bob. Notice I said home because I spent alot of time there and Jean pretty much let me stay over all the time. Even though I haven't seen you in year's I often think of all of you and miss all of you very much. Rhonda was the last person I seen in I believe 2010 at Universal studios with her husband and some of my family. It was a wonderful Day. To Jean I will miss you Dearly and wish I had got to see you years ago. You are a Beautiful soul and God now has you in his arm's. R.I.P Jean . Love you Always Susan Gushee.♥♥♥

I can remember Christmas when we were little. Mom always made sure we had a good Christmas no matter how much or little we had. The funny part is since she had 4 girls, she wanted to make sure we all had an equal amount and we all got the same thing! She would buy us each a different color of an item, but we learned that if one of us opened a gift that our same size box would contain the same item! She was also a HUGE Gator fan! she loved watching the games each Saturday and would call me the Friday before when she lived in her home to find out the time and channel and of course who they were playing. Rhonda took over that job when she moved into the ALF. She no longer could see but Rhonda would make sure she filled her in on the highlights of the game. To watch her and Bob battle over the UF and Florida State game was cool. I am truly going to miss you Mom, and my days are already different by me not being able to get you on the phone each day to see how your day was. My Thursday are going to be lonely as I looked forward to spending the entire day with you each week. Sometimes it was doctor visit and other days it was just quality time getting out and eating at the different restaurants you loved When I would laugh you would always smile and when I would ask you what you were smiling about you would say " I love to hear you laugh" You were my best friend and the best mom I could ask for! I will always love you and miss giving you "Lucy kisses" Sandra
