There should be no doubt that there was so much potential that unfortunately was made waste by machinations born from a deficiency en certain chemicals natural to the body. With progress comes new stresses. You could perhaps have been some kind of character, and you where but not in a conventional way. RIP... You had your run, you lived your fantasy, and you taught us a lesson you should have learned yourself... Hubris!

To Evelyn, Tony, Kelly, Waldemar, and all who loved John - I am so sorry you all are going through this loss. I send so much love and prayers for comfort your way.To John - your mom loves you and your brother so much. I felt I knew both of you through how much she shared about each of you when I worked with her. I pray you find rest and peace.

John and I met when I 15 in a LBGT center in NYC. I was sitting waiting in the library for another friend to finish her group therapy. I was reading Langston Hughes poetry book when John walked in and sat across me and said I see you like poetry too after that day we were inseparable. One day he looked at me and said you know what I think I just found my soul mate and my best friend. I will miss him dearly. Fly high my love. I hope you're dancing in the sky.

You have never loved anyone... You use people and then discard them when they don't suit your needs. His death is in your doing , you used him and abused him... And you were never a husband LIAR!

In moments of sorrow, we are all equal. Words fail to describe the emotions that surface when a loved one has transitioned to a place of rest. May the memories of moments gone by, help navigate this unexpected departure. May your faith and those close to you bring comfort and hold your hand... The living must continue to live so as to honor those that are in eternal rest... Namaste!

J. Krishnamurti Online

Death is inevitable. It may take years or it may happen tomorrow – there is a sudden ending of this continuity. So realising that, acting with care and affection, live with death. That means no attachment whatsoever to anything – to your name, your fame, your power, your position – nothing. It is not difficult; it is very easy if you really want to do it. With the ending of that which is continuous – the ending – there is a new beginning. Without ending, there is no beginning. I know you will agree and say, 'Yes, marvellous, perfect,' but then carry on with your ugly life. And that is where there is great sorrow.

From Public Talk 3, Bombay (Mumbai), 15 January 1977
